A Letter From Fr. Kennell

Dear Friends,

We have come to the final Sunday of the Bread of Life Discourse. Now comes the moment of choice: do we believe what Jesus has taught – that he really is the Bread of Life – or do we doubt? And if we doubt, do we then choose to walk away? Thankfully, we have a great witness and example in St. Peter, who recognizes in faith that Jesus really does have the words of eternal life, and even in the face of doubt, it makes sense still to trustingly follow him. If we truly are seeking, we will find.

That is the case of one of our great Saints in the history of the Church who is celebrated this week. St. Augustine lived in the fourth century and was a seeker through the first three decades or so of his life. Eventually, through the preaching of St. Ambrose in Milan, where Augustine had taken a teaching position, he was finally converted to being a disciple of Jesus Christ. He had tried many other things up to that point in life, but it was when he heard the words of eternal life of Jesus transmitted through the ministry of St. Ambrose in a particular way, he knew there was nowhere and no one else to turn. His is a story worth looking up and learning about. In fact, he wrote one of the very first autobiographies of Western literature: The Confessions.

An important aspect of the story of St. Augustine is that he acknowledged his mother as being pivotal in his conversion because of her incessant prayers and tears for him. Intercessory prayer is so important! And it is particularly important, I believe, of parents for their children. Parents, don't ever stop praying and even making sacrifices for the spiritual well-being of your children! Like St. Ambrose and St. Monica, spiritual father and literal mother of St. Augustine, the example of living the faith is critical for the spiritual growth and solidification of the faith in your children. Get to know the words of eternal life communicated to us only by Jesus Christ, and in a particular way through the most holy Eucharist – his Body and Blood, Soul and Divinity. And teach your children the same!

Saint Monica and St. Augustine, pray for us!

-Fr. Kennell

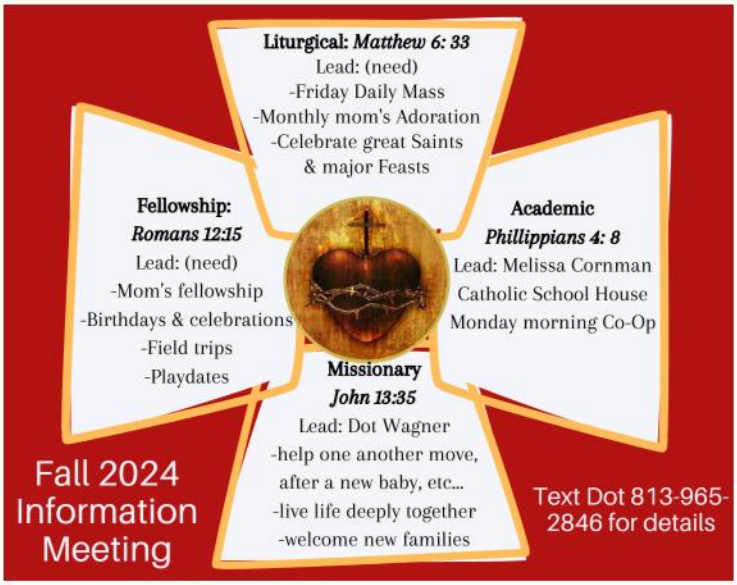
Panama City Catholic Homeschool Fellowship



The Sacred Heart Homeschool Fellowship is an association of Catholic families in the Panama City area founded on the belief that God has entrusted to parents the primary responsibility for forming our children in body, mind and spirit; and that work is best carried out in a communion of families that are each one a domestic church, enlivened by the love of the Sacred Heart of Jesus.

Our cooperative is meant to foster the fellowship of families, the immersion of each family in the liturgical life of the church, the mission of each family in the community, and the academic goals of each family. We live as a community of families bound together by charity, founded on a faith that is solidly in communion with the magisterial authority of the Catholic Church, united in mind and heart with our Holy Father and our local Bishop, and organically linked to the life of our respective parishes. We exist to evangelize one another, our children, and our greater Panama City community.
